Onvio Documents supports multiple file formats including both audio and image files. The product uses a flexible folder structure, so users can create the structure that works best for their firm and their clients. Onvio Documents also allows users to create folder templates that makes it easy to setup new folders. All documents stored in Onvio Documents are organized by category, with tabs available for each category, which include All Documents, Client Documents, Firm Documents, My Documents, and Recent Activity. Users can also access the recycle bin from within Onvio Documents.

Onvio Documents allows users to scan documents directly into the application; working with any Twain compliant scanner. Multiple documents can be scanned simultaneously, and OCR capability in the application provides easy document search in the future. Documents can also be added to Onvio Documents from a variety of third-party document storage applications such as Google Drive, Dropbox, or Box.

Onvio Documents also allows users to review client folders to ensure that all requested documents are in the folder. If a document is missing, users can create an email from the document management application requesting that the client upload the document directly to Onvio Documents, eliminating the need to send confidential information via email. Users can view any requests made under the Requests tab, allowing them to keep track of any documents that have been requested and are still outstanding.

Onvio Documents offers easy document search capability, with users choosing the category they wish to search. Choosing a category will display all the documents in that category, where users can then enter specific search terms such as client name or file type. Onvio Documents also offers a Share Folder option that allows users to store documents that will be shared with colleagues and clients, provided that adequate file sharing permissions have been established with the recipients. Users also have the option to edit any accessed file, with an option to save a new version of
