Be a Better HR/Talent Advisor: Things Your Professors Never Taught You.

College accounting programs sometimes overlook the non-technical skills that professional accountants need in order to be successful in their careers. What are these skills, why is it their absence a problem, how can they be obtained, and how can we as a profession address this? No matter what level you are at within the accounting profession, if you are working with people who have differing expectations, hiring new staff, offering training to colleagues, or just trying to get through the day with your co-workers and clients, you won't want to miss this necessary session.

Panelists:

- Kelly Welter
- Roger Nieman
- Christina Ricke
